Garden Talk

Today let us talk about Dianthus, a dainty flower our grandmothers grew in their gardens.

Dianthus, carnations, pinks — call them what you will, but do grow them in your perennial garden. For the price of a few packets of seed and a little of your time, you can have a border full of these charming flowers.

A glance at any good seed catalog will show you that there are more varieties of dianthus than you can shake a hoe at. Since they have been in cultivation since prehistoric times, it's no wonder so many interesting variations have cropped up. Theophrastus referred to a wild pink as "Jove's flower" or dianthus, and the name has stuck. Later on, Chaucer, Spenser and Shakespeare all found occasion to honor the gilliflower, the name the English gave the carnation when it was introduced from the Continent.

If you're curious enough to see just how varied these flowers have become, buy a packet of mixed seed and see what a collection you get. Then you can weed out the less desirable plants and give the best a chance to spread. Even if you buy a packet of Heddewig pinks or Dianthus chinensis, don't expect to get "all of a kind," from your sowings. Some will be single, some double, and some in-betweens.

Should you prefer a more uniform selection, buy named varieties of dianthus. Snowball is a large double, and Pure White is a good singe in the whites. Pink Beauty and Rosalind are both double pinks. Fireball is a double and Scarlet Queen is a single in the reds. Deeper red are Midnight and Violet Queen, doubles.

Even more spectacular are the hardy garden carnations, which come in red, scarlet, white, yellow, salmon, rose, and pink.

Although you can start dianthus in a seedbox, and later transplant them to permanent quarters, you may plant them right where they are to grow. Cover them with no more than an eighth of an inch of pulverized soil, press them down, and then sprinkle them. Keep the spot shaded and moist until the seeds germinate, then remove the cover but continue to water until the seedlings become established.

Once dianthus get established they require almost no attention. To keep them blooming, however, you should break off dead flower heads periodically. Water them in dry spells and once or twice during the summer give them light feedings, well watered in, of course. Cared for in this manner, young pinks may be treated as perennial subjects in the garden, rather than as annuals or biennials, as they are sometimes grown.

'Miracle Baby' Is Now In Her Second Year

Above: Mrs. Russell Martin had to don a nurse's outfit, for her first look at her "miracle baby" in a hospital isolette. It was weeks later before Mrs. Martin could hold young Penny Sue.

"She's not as big as a nickel. Let's name her Penny!"

And that is how Penny Sue Martin got her name. She is the year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Martin, of Route 4, Appomattox. The naming was done by Merlyn Kaye, 10 year old sister of the baby who has attracted wide attention in this area because of the fact that is considered a miracle that she survived and developed into a normal girl.

Penny Sue was born at the Virginia Baptist Hospital on March 22, 1956. At the age of 8 days, she weighed only 21 ounces! A twin sister died, weighing only 26 ounces.

Penny Sue was placed in an incubator, and fed 3 cc's of milk every 3 hours (a cc is 15 drops). It was many weeks before Mrs. Martin was permitted to hold her baby. When the time came to risk Penny Sue out of the incubator, clothing for so tiny an infant became a major problem, until a nurse went down town and purchased some doll clothes. The first panties measured 3½ by 5 inches. Penny Sue weighed 5 pounds at the age of three months, and was brought to her Appomattox County home. At 6 months she got her first shoes—doll shoes, just over 3 inches long. Mrs. Martin today proudly exhibits these doll clothes.

Under loving care, and frequent check-ups, Penny Sue grew, and at the age of one year had a birthday party, and weighed in at 18 pounds, just about normal for a girl baby of age one. Now she is getting her teeth and the parents anxiously await the day she will take her first steps.

Penny's doctor calls her his "miracle baby!" Maybe there are miracles, after all. And maybe Penny Sue Martin is one of them.

Fort Smith, Ark. - Glenn C. Brown, 23, Specialist 2-c, home on leave from Texas, was involved in an auto collision, in which he was thrown from his car. He was fatally injured. The driver of the other automobile was his brother, Jerry Brown, 21. Both cars were driving in the same direction.

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR

Seattle, Wash.- An advertiser in a Seattle newspaper recently was rather irate when he read his ad. It offered for sale "30 terrible acres. Will be foreclosed if not sold promptly. This is a steal for a person with imagination." There was one mistake, the acres were "tillable."

The Senate has approved a fifteen-month extension of the present corporation and sales taxes.

PLANE LANDS IN AUTO LOT

New York.- Robert A. Shaver, 20, of Queens, took off from an airport in a rented plane at 9:50 A. M., in a cross-country flight. As he neared Connecticut, the plane developed engine trouble and he was forced to turn back. The first level clearing he saw was a parking lot, nearly empty of automobiles. Shaver set the plane down between a long row of lamp posts. He was unhurt.

21 MOST DANGEROUS

New York.- Men 21 years old record the highest mortality from motor vehicle accidents, according to statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, on the basis of experience among the company's millions of industrial policyholders. At this age, the toll among men is nearly eight times that of women.
